

August 27, 2010

Back-to-School with Biscoff Cookies- Review

My boys are going back to school starting next Monday and this means, I have to get creative in the kitchen again and think of great lunches to pack for school.

Biscoff -- Europe's favorite cookies with coffee -- can be every kid's favorite lunchbox treat too!

The next time you're at your grocery store snack and cookie aisle, check out these Biscoff Lotus Bakeries cookies that are individually wrapped. When I received these cookies to try out, I was thinking, "hmmm... a sweet alternative for school lunches that's low in sugar and contain no trans fats or butter? Why not?"

Biscoff cookies have a crisp, caramelized taste and I like that they're made with all-natural ingredients-- no artificial colors or preservatives! Plus, with only 30 to 65 calories per cookie, Biscoff is an ideal alternative for when you want to throw in a piece of sweet cookie to complete your kid's school lunches. And since Biscoff are individually wrapped, they can be stored almost anywhere and will stay pantry-fresh all school year long!

And if you're anything like me who loves cookies with my coffee, Biscoff cookies is my new "coffee cookies"! Yummm. Love it! :)

Biscoff cookies are available in singles, two-packs and extra-large on-the-go packs online at www.biscoff.com, or at a store near you!

Hip Mama's Place Disclosure: "My opinions remain my own. Biscoff sent me several packs of Biscoff Lotus Bakeries cookies to facilitate my candid review".

About the Author: Jocelyn Duncan is a working mom of two boys and is a recognized blogger and mom influencer in the Washington, DC area. In her spare time, she designs and creates her own handmade jewelry, maintains her jewelry store on Etsy and is an active moms group organizer and leader both online and offline. Hip Mama's Place was nominated for Parents' Picks 2010 Best Parenting Blogs and named one of the Highest Rated Blogs and Sites on Nickelodeon ParentsConnect for the Washington, DC area. Follow Jocelyn on Twitter and/or Facebook.