

Curbed Inside: The Infinity, Part Deux!

February 5, 2009

A finished model, closer to the Bay Bridge

Curbed went on a tour today of perhaps the last residential project of its scale for years to come — the Embarcadero-side Infinity Tower II. The second tower opens officially this weekend, with first move-ins scheduled for April. Our photos may be a little deja vu if you've seen the first one already, though the developers note that the second tower has nicer finishings than the first. The units we viewed also had an unobstructed view of the Bay Bridge and the bay, making the view the single most dominating element of the residences by far. You wake up to the Bay Bridge, shower by the Bay Bridge, eat by the Bay Bridge, watch the "Gilmore Girls" by the Bay Bridge... you get the point. One-bedrooms start mid-$500k, two at high $700k, and three at high $900k. Penthouse: well, if you've got that kind of money, you don't need to know.

http://sf.curbed.com/archives/2009/02/05/curbed_inside_the_infinity_part_deux.php