

Looking for new attractions in San Francisco? Here are some ideas for travelers

SAN FRANCISCO — Miniature golf and alcohol, together at last. New lights on the Ferry Building. Fire pits and picnickers on the Presidio's parade lawn. Screaming scarlet walls on Nob Hill. A clamorous neo-Hawaiian feast on Sutter Street and a muted neo-Mexican repast in the Mission District. These things are happening in San Francisco. I found them, and a few other recent changes, on a recent trip. Here's the lowdown.

SIGHTS

The Museum of the African Diaspora at 685 Mission St. was born in 2005, then born again in December after a six-month makeover. Through Oct. 11, it's showing "Portraits and Other Likenesses," a collection of about 50 works borrowed from the nearby San Francisco Museum of Modern Art (which is closed for expansion until 2016). It's a fascinating show.

Info: www.moadsf.org

http://www.msn.com/en-us/travel/summervacation/looking-for-new-attractions-in-san-francisco-here-are-some-ideas-for-travelers/ar-AAchC1R#tevt=click_nonnav