Unlocking Your Outdoor Kitchen Potential

When it comes to choosing a sink for your outdoor kitchen, you want something as resilient as it is striking. Native Trails' copper sinks have that 'wow' factor due to their earthy tones and hammered texture. Additionally, these beautiful basins resist mildew, never rust, and are made of 100% recycled copper.

As more people view their outdoor space as an extension of their home, greater investment will be made into how these areas look and perform. Here are four sink selections from Native Trails to help you entertain with style and ease:

Luna

This copper sink will add polish to any bar or prep area. Its near-vertical walls create a bucket-style basin with a conveniently ample base, which is perfect for cooling bottles of beer or white wine on a summer day.

Mojito

With a look as refreshing as its namesake, this hammered copper sink enhances any outdoor bar or prep area and exemplifies innovative design with festive flavor.

Redondo Grande

This copper sink will add polish to any bar or prep area. Its near-vertical walls create a bucket-style basin with a conveniently ample base, which is perfect for cooling bottles of beer or white wine on a summer day.

Rio Grande

Rio Grande's copper trough perfectly balances utility for the job and beauty for the party. This trough sink's graded bottom allows water to cascade naturally toward the drain, making cleanup a breeze.
