

REMODELISTA

10 Easy Pieces: Freestanding Copper Bathtubs

Alexa Hotz | March 8, 2017

Luxury à la française: Copper soaking tubs were popular among 18th-century French monarchy (Marie Antoinette had one at Versailles), and in the late 19th century Degas painted Parisian women bathing in copper baths.

Aside from the regal associations, there are practical reasons, too, to opt for a copper bath: They're good conductors of heat (they evenly distribute and retain heat), they're corrosion-resistant, and they're naturally antimicrobial.

Sold? Here are our 10 favorite freestanding copper bathtubs.

Above: The Native Trails Santorini Freestanding Copper Soaking Tub is made of recycled copper and is hand-hammered by a coppersmith; $9,490 at Native Trails.