

The San Diego Union-Tribune.

High-end luxury abounds at Architectural Digest show

By: Jamie Gold
April 27, 2017

These gorgeous Native Trails soaker tubs are made from recycled copper. (Sean Dagen / Native Trails)

Did your mom have copies of Architectural Digest on her coffee or foyer table? For its 97 years of publishing history, millions of Americans have enjoyed AD's glossy pages of luxury furnishings. It has been an arbiter of high-end style for decades before it became a design event in 2002.

So it's no surprise that the annual Architectural Digest Design Show in New York features luxe (and luxe-looking) products for your home. Brands like Gaggenau, Thermador, Miele and Sony share the hall with up-and-coming artisans in the MADE section. Even the food court was finer than usual at this March expo.

If you didn't make it to New York, here are some of the cool products you missed.

For your bathroom

1. Native Trails Santorini Tubs

Native Trails has been making beautiful sinks and tubs for years, and their new collection of artisan-crafted recycled copper fixtures does not disappoint. The freestanding Santorini soaker tubs, named after a gorgeous Greek isle, are particularly beautiful. (There's also a MetalProtect coating to keep yours looking new.)

Available: Now

Manufacturer's suggested retail price (MSRP): Tubs $9,330 to $13,330
/ MetalProtect $39.95

Website: nativetrails.net