CELEBRATING 30 YEARS

Change. Create. Communicate.

David Landis Retires from LCI: Sean Dowdall Promoted To President

LCI's Founder David Landis retires October 1st as former GM Sean Dowdall takes LCI's helm

David Landis founded Landis Communications, Inc. at his kitchen table in San Francisco 31 years ago. Created from the belief that integrated communications can move markets and minds, the agency reflects the growth of industries like technology, healthcare, the environment and consumer goods/services, as reflected in its client list. LCI's award-winning work continues under newly named President, Sean Dowdall.

Long a supporter of non-profit causes, David will be focusing his abundant energies on his work with arts organizations and non-profits providing food and services for those in need, including San Francisco's modern dance company, ODC and Project Open Hand, which serves meals to vulnerable populations. A prolific writer, David continues to contribute to the San Francisco Business Times, Forbes and the San Francisco Bay Times. If you want to follow along on his gastronomic adventures, be sure to read his ongoing monthly SF Bay Times column and blog, The Gay Gourmet (Seriously, how did he find time to run a business?!). And listen in as he interviews stars of opera, symphony and Broadway as the new Curator for the Amateur Music Network.

There isn't enough room in this newsletter to list all of David's professional accomplishments, but this press release highlights a few.

We wish David bon voyage, many mai-tais and exciting new adventures ahead! And we know our clients, staff and business associates are in good hands with Sean and the rest of the LCI staff. If you care to keep in touch with David, his personal email is: davidlandissf@gmail.com.

We're Making David Work Hard Right Up Until The Last Day...
